SUNDAY
JULY 12, 1953

Aroused somewhat early this morning, we went to town. E. and Audrey attended church.

Brucie is ill and was visited by two veterinarians in turn, both of whom took gloomy views of his life expectancy. The last one said that unless he benefitted from the rejuvenating injections of Bogumoletz serum he would be paralyzed by winter. His heart also is in bad condition. Poor darling, he is very game and exhausts himself completely in chasing birds and animals.

Audrey, E. and I left on the 8:20 p.m. train for Bonn.
